

The Importance of the Transport And Tourism Sectors and Their Role in Investing and Developing Human And Economic Resources in Damascus and Zabadani Area

Dr. Haitham Na'as*

Abstract

Transport and tourism sectors are part of the financial and service production pillars. Their target is to increase the economic competence and achieve the human development through condensed investment of the economic and civilized potentials, and the best employment national labor.

The Syrian Economy tries to prove its existence and seeks to continue its steps in the process of development. In these attempts it takes advantage from its strong points which are referred to through keeping the total economic stability and making every public and official effort to support those vital fields and to activate their role in pursuit of achieving the sustainable growth and balanced economic stability. This will result in increasing the level of public income and decreasing unemployment rates.

This could be achieved through creating the most possible number of job opportunities, besides setting an integrated mechanism for development to highlight Syria's civilized facet and show its strategic status and its tourist impotence on the Arab and international levels.
