Abstract

Undoubtedly, the genitive is one of the noun signs which separates it from two other kinds of words: verb and letter. And the genitive joins the noun by one of the two agents-preposition particles and annexation. As a result' the postfixed must be an explicit noun or a sentence that changes to a noun by following one of the infinitival particles' and the postfixed never could be a sentence.

Never theless, the Arabic syntactic allocated it a part of the annexation chapter. This has been done without any mention of the above mentioned difficulty.

This article is an attempt to clarify the issue.

Key words: prefixed, postfixed, sentence, accusative, plastic accusatives, plastic accusatives, supplying a noun verb from a sentence, conjunct, conjunctive, accusative conjunct, accusative conjunctive.
