Abstract

The global financial crises are the most important and dominating topics in the news in the modern era, due to the financial globalization that led to the transformation to the global financial activity and economic and global markets; which led to link the economies of the world to each other. Which at the same time the most dialectic threads that pose as a key question about the nature of the crises, and if it's came from the nature of the capitalist economy, or whether it arose because of the current global financial system, or is it a natural progression and a correction for the process of the structural imbalances that appears, or is the result of the classic banking system according to the point of view of some Muslims, or is it fabricated in order to achieve political and economic objectives for specific categories; from this perspective will be studying the global financial crisis
